

We have had information that the FCC is trying to issue a proposal about Telephone Privacy Law protections. We have a law here in the state of Indiana and don't see why the government has to do one also. We feel that the states should be able to provide that service to their residents. Since it went into effect we are not bothered with the annoying phone calls, especially around dinner time and later in the evening. It seems that the US government wants to get their hand into everything.
